

Merrindal Routley

Supporting a solar thermal plant in Port Augusta would be a really smart move on the part of the South Australian government.

Coal is fast becoming a stranded asset and Australia is going to need a sensible replacement for its base load power supply.

South Australia could lead the way.